Reagan's 'New Federalism': Friends and Foes See a Bid to Shift Attention From Deficits

By Hedrick Smith New York Times Service

WASHINGTON - With a far-reaching initiative for shifting federal programs to the states. President Reagan has signaled his determination to press forward with "the Reagan revolution" in government and has moved forcefully in an effort to dominate the legislative agenda in the face of recession and a restless election-year Congress.

In a State of the Union Message that culminated weeks of internal debate, Mr. Reagan overruled the White House staff and economic advisers who urged him to combat ballooning federal deficits by increasing excise taxes. And he took the risk that later this year Congress would see deficits as its top priority and try to take the political initiative from him.

Tacitly, by changing his emphasis from the budget and tax-cutting battles of 1981 to what he calls his "new federalism," the president was adapting to the economic reality that he could not produce "a quick fix" for the economy and the political reality that congressional majorities would probably balk at another round of huge budget cuts. Allies and foes alike saw his initiative as an effort to divert attention from the projected budget deficits of nearly $100 billion in this fiscal year.

Instead, Mr. Reagan chose to emphasize that his primary personal mission was to slow the growth of federal spending and reduce the size of the U.S. government, and to make clear that even the current economic downturn has not shaken his faith in the tax-cut strategy of supply-side economics.

He seemed to be answering his own inner circle when he declared: "The doubters would have us turn back the clock with tax increases that would offset the personal tax-rate reduc-tions already passed by this Congress. Raise present taxes to cut future deficits, they tell us. Well, I don't believe we should buy their argu-

He seemed also to be warning congressional Republicans and Democrats who were tempted to enact tax increases, cautioning that this tactic would not lower deficits or balance the budget but would only slow economic growth, reduce production and destroy future jobs.

program as well as the conservative political revolution he has introduced, Mr. Reagan urged the public to "summon the strength to continue on the course we have charted" in spite of the pain of rising unemployment and widening recession. In terms of political strategy, White House officials reckoned, moreover, that after a year when Mr. Reagan dominated the political are-na, the new proposal to gradually turn over 40 federal programs to the states not only fit the president's basic philosophy but was also likely to be the best way to sustain political mo-

An Immediate Omen

This represents the fifth installment on the president's mandate," James A. Baker 3d, the White House chief of staff, said. "Last year, he and he strengthened defense. The fifth thing he wanted to do was return power to the states. This fundamental realignment of the federal system is a dramatic and bold initia-tive, and I think it's going to allow us to domi-

But an immediate omen came from the House Republican leader, Robert M. Michel, of Illinois. While backing the president's pro-posal, he noted that it did not directly address the nation's economic plight in an election

"This is right in line with Republican dog-ma," Rep. Michel said, "but my enthusiasm has to be muted a bit because it doesn't create one new job now. It's a partial answer to the long-range problem but it does not do any-thing for the immediate problem."

Not only Republican congressional leaders but even White House officials concede that, as Congress approaches early votes on raising the debt ceiling or adopting a 1983 budget res-olution, the deficit issue could take precedence and touch off bipartisan efforts to cut military spending or raise taxes.

Pressure Forecast

Both moderate Northern Republicans such as Rep. Bill Green of New York and conserva-tive Southern Democrats like Rep. G.V. Montgomery of Mississippi forecast pressure on the president to cut military spending to restrain deficits.

"I see some signs that Republicans in both if the problem of the deficits and interest rates is not addressed head-on." said Rep. James R. Jones of Oklahoma, the House Budget Committee chairman.

Presidential aides conceded that Mr. Reagan might have more problems dominating the po-litical arena this year than last but decided that they had little alternative but to come up with a series of initiatives, including abolition of the departments of energy and education but with the "new federalism" as the centerpiece, to gain the upper hand politically.

"I think we can hold the initiative this year," a White House official, said. "We're not naive. a white flouse official said. We le not halve, lt's going to be tough. But we think we can get a good portion of this program passed. And if we had gone up there with just more budget cuts, we would lose the momentum in five

Moreoever, the White House has laid plans to take his case to the for Mr. Reagan himself to take his case to the nation, scheduling appearances before legisla-tures in Illinois, Iowa and Minnesota early

But the "new federalism" package faces a long, arduous legislative fight, especially with Democrats in a partisan mood, as they indicated in their prepackaged, nationally televised

it touches many programs, it will have to be approved by a host of congressional commitees and is likely to take up most of the year's

One issue that promises to dog Mr. Reagan increasingly, and one he sought to anticipate at several points Tuesday night, is the Democratic charge that his entire program unfairly hurts the poor. Even some Northern Republicans say that will be a critical test of his "new federlism" proposals.

Worried about the impact on New York, Rep. Green said that Congress would have to ensure that the tax revenues the president was turning over to the states would grow as rapidly as the programs that are being turned over and also that Northern states would not be hurt by having other states adopt lower standards for programs like food stamps and wel-

Recalling the comment by David A. Stockman, the budget director, that the 1981 Reagan tax program was "a Trojan Horse" for traditional Republican economics, Rep. Green said: "If Stockman put together this gift horse for the states, we will want to look at it in the teeth very closely."

Memories of Assault On Mine in Katowice Darken Poland's Mood

By John Darnton

New York Times Service WARSAW - Polish travelers from Katowice say the situation in the Silesian coal-mining region is much more tense than elsewhere in the country, with heavy police and army patrols and deep public an-ger over the killing of striking miners several days after martial law

Numerous reports, including one from a local priest, insist that perhaps as many as six members of the security forces also died in the assault on the Wujek mine, in which at least seven miners were killed on Dec. 16. The authorities have denied that any policemen or soldiers have been killed anywhere

"I talked with a father [priest] who was present throughout the attack," said a 22-year-old man from Katowice, "and he saw six bodies in uniforms covered by white sheets." Other sources, including one high party source ted to have only one priest in atleast one policeman died at the Wojek mine, which is in a Katowice suburb. However, there is no way to obtain independent confirmation of any of the reports.

The young man from Katowice said he visited the Wuick mine last week and found that a wire fence placed over a hole knocked into the concrete wall by a tank had become a makeshift shrine. Near the fence was an 8-foot-high crucifix and, next to that, seven red and yellow miners' helmets.

"Every mmer on his way to work stops, lifts his cap or kneels and lights a candle," he said. Nearby, on the fence itself, were plastered scores of leaflets and posters, denouncing the police and extolling the Solidarity union. "Solidarity was and will be," read one. Others said: "Death to the fascist murderers of our miners" and "We pray for Solidarity."

Various leaflets were attached to the fence, including the notice of a funeral service in the memory of the tragically murdered miners." The travelers said that the authorities had refused permission for a mass funeral for the slain miners. Instead, the family of each victim was informed of the funeral on the day it took place and was permit-

It was also learned that the mili tary commissar of the Wujek mine had ordered the removal of seven miners lamps that were placed near the cross, each bearing the name of a slain miner. The fact (Continued on Page 2, Col. 2)

The Kremlin After Suslov's Death: A Need for Stability

One theory circulating among diplomats here Tuesday was that Mr. Suslov's death\might clear the way for a somewhat less doctrinaire approach by the leadership, in political as well as economic and cultural matters. In turn, the diplomats suggested, potential successors to Mr. Brezhnev in the Politburo might find it easier to press their candidates on a platform of factors, including bureaucratic resistance, that will continue to militate against any major easing of domestic policies.

The effect on foreign policy, particularly relations with the United States, is especially hard to predict. Although Mr. Suslov re-mained wary of Westerners, he was a strong backer of the policy of détente, under which the Kremlin sought arms agreements with Washington and a broadening of made, cultural contacts and other exchanges with the West, Two years ago, he described the relaxation of East-West tensions as "a historic achievement" and urged that it continue.

Given his reservations, Mr. Suslov may have lost some of his enthusiasm for détente in the last two years as Afghanistan, Poland and other issues created fresh tensions with the West. Although he seldom spoke in public, and re-responsive to the people by stripping an array of more than 40 programs out of federal control and turning them over to the states.

Noting that he plans to make a separate speech on foreign policy. Mr. Reagan said, "Our sanctions against the military dictatorship that has attempted to crush human rights in Poland — and against the Soviet regime behind that military dictatorship — clearly demonstrated to the world that America will not conduct 'business as usual' with the forces of oppression." Reiterating a pledge made Jan. 19, he said, "If the events in Poland continue to deteriorate, further measures will follow." He added that the United States will act firmly toward "those who export terrorism and subversion in the Caribbean and elsewhere, especially Cuba and Libya."

The proposal to turn more responsibilities over to the states, which Mr. Reagan called Federalism," would realize a dream that he has had since the start of his political life in the 1960s. He campaigned year after year against big government, and his proposal would make federal government a good deal smaller.

"Our citizens feel they have lost control of even the most basic decisions made about the essential services of government, such as schools, welfare, roads, and even garbage collection. They are right," Mr. Reagan told a joint session of Congress.

In the major element of the program, the federal government would assume all costs of Medicaid, which now is a joint federalstate program, and would turn ing some 40 other domestic spending programs over to the states to tinue of not as they chose. For an interim period, the federal government would also turn over funds to help the states pay for them but after 1991 that aid would cease and it would be up to the states to levy the taxes to support them. The president devoted most of his address to federalism and the economy, but he also said:

 The journey toward civil rights for all citizens "must continne with no backsliding or slowing down." He added that his administration's commitment to equal rights for women "is firm and

 The nation's legal system, "which overly protects the rights of criminals," must be transformed to combat crime.

Mr. Reagan used his speech to hail the achievements of his first year in cutting federal spending, eliminating federal regulations, attacking government waste and fraud, and strengthening defense. "Together, we have made a new beginning, but we have only begun," the president told Congress. The record is clear, and I believe history will remember this as an era of American renewal: re-administration of change; and remember this Congress as a Congress of destiny."

It was a speech in which Mr. Reagan never had to go against his instincts. He reiterated his belief in the program he put in place last year and went on to call for his long-cherished idea of government realignment

He rejected any "quick fix" course correction in the face of huge estimated deficits for this year and 1983 and 1984 — estimates that brought calls for remedial action from his senior advisers. Instead, the president told the nation to "summon the strength to continue on the course we have charted."

The president went on to promise budget deficits far lower than the $100 billion to $150 billion estimated by others.

He said that the economic forecasts he will submit to Congress on Feb. 8 will show a 1982 deficit of less than $100 billion and declining deficits in the following years.

He said that he will call for savings in benefit programs totaling $63 billion over four years without affecting Social Security, and he strongly rejected charges that his spending cuts jeopardize the poor.

"Contrary to some of the wild charges you may have heard, this administration has not and will not turn its back on America's elderly or America's poor," the president said. "I am confident that the economic program we have put into operation will protect the needy while it triggers a recovery that will benefit all Americans."

Details of his proposed remedy remain to be worked out with Congress and state and local officials. he said, but he described it as the return of about $47 billion in programs to state and local government "together with the means to finance them and a transition peri-

An African diplomat said that the black-ruled nations had accepted the main aspects of the Western proposals for constitutional guidelines for the territory, also known as Namibia, but objected to the proposed voting arrangements for an assembly that would write the constitution.

In Cape Town, South African officials described their government's response as "positive" and said they regarded the first phase of the plan as completed. No de-tails were given, however, and there was no indication from diplomatic sources as to whether any qualifications or conditions had been attached. It appeared that, in view of the objection raised by the black-ruled nations, further delay was in prospect for the attempt made for nearly five years by the United States, Britain, France, West Germany and Canada to bring about the independence of the disputed

• A corporate minimum tax. Under this proposal, corporations, when calculating their tax liability, would be required to use both normal methods and a second system. Under the second system, the cor-poration would add back to its adjusted gross income certain tax ces and then take specified exemptions. The corporation would then be required to pay the higher of the figures produced by the two systems.

Haig Offers Proposals On Palestinian Talks

By Don Oberdorfer and William Claiborne

Washington Post Service
JERUSALEM — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. initiated a new U.S. push for early and visible progress in the Middle East peace process in a round of meet-ings with Israeli leaders here

According to U.S. and Israeli ofcan "ideas" for bridging the gaps in several areas between Israel and Egypt in the stalled negotiations Reagan's choice for deputy secre-tary of state, said Wednesday that about Palestinian autonomy in the West Bank and Gaza.

The diplomats described Mr. Haig's offerings as suggestions of a general nature rather than formal or detailed proposals. After a fourhour meeting Wednesday night with Prime Minister Menachem Begin, Mr. Haig termed them "general formulas in certain narrow areas." Israeli Army radio said the suggestions dealt with land and settlement policy as well as the legislative powers of the proposed self-governing authority for the Palestinians. Official briefers of the two sides would confirm only that the scope and authority of the autonomous council was involved. There was no expectation that Israel would immediately agree to Mr. Haig's suggestions or that Egyptian officials would do so when the secretary of state travels on to Cairo Thursday. The hope expressed by U.S. officials was rather that Mr. Haig's ideas would bring about a common concentration on areas where major progress can be made, dispelling concern that the Camp David peace process is dead except for the return of the Sinai scheduled for midnight April 25.

"Haig told us today he very strongly believes it is possible to reach an agreement," an Israeli official said. He added that Mr. Haig did not make clear how extensive such an agreement might be or when it might be reached.

"There's a great deal more to be done, and there are many differences," Mr. Haig said after his long meeting with Mr. Begin. "But there is also some slight progress." Mr. Haig's earlier visit was de-scribed as a "fact-finding" mission to determine whether intensified U.S. diplomatic involvement is warranted and necessary. The dis-cussions Wednesday seemed to indicate an affirmative answer and a decision to become more active at a high level in pushing for a renewal of progress. The secretary of state gave no clear indication in his initial talks Wednesday about his preferred mechanism for moving ahead with the suggestions he advanced. There was no talk of a three-way meeting on the foreign-minister level of Mr. Haig, Yitzhak Shamir of Israel and Kamal Hassan Ali of Egypt, according to Israeli officials.

quest $11 billion over the next five

Congress, which must vote on both plans, seems likely to approve the air transports, although the high price will undoubtedly raise objections. The chemical weapons proposal, however, has already drawn stiff opposition and seems certain to arouse more from opponents who contend that it would inflame anti-American sentiment in Western Europe, where the weapons will be used if a war

The budgetary implications of the two decisions were not immediately clear. It could not be determined whether the programs had already been included in the military spending projections, whether they would be financed by taking money from other military programs or whether they would add to the projected budgets.

Although the two decisions moved on separate tracks, they were loosely connected. The air transports are intended to move tanks, helicopters, armored troop carriers and artillery, including chemical shells, to Europe to reinforce U.S. troops there, or to the region around the Gulf to support the Rapid Deployment Force. The chemical weapons, intended for use in massed land combat, would be stored in the United States but would need air transport to be rushed to Europe in the event of hostilities. Lt. Gen. Kelly H. Burke, who is in charge of weapons development and acquisition for the Air Force, said at a briefing that the administration, Congress and the military services agreed the nation was painfully lacking in long-range airlift capacity.

To overcome that, he said, the Air Force has made several recommendations, including the develop-ment of a new transport craft known as the McDonnell Douglas C-17. It would have had better military capabilities than the C-5 but would have taken about 18 months longer to build.

Reagan Seeking Air Transports, Toxic Arms Gen. Burke said that the C-17 program was based on a budget of 5.5 billion. But Defense Secretary aspar W. Weinberger and Depu-Secretary Frank C. Carlucci told the Air Force to lift the budget ceiling and find a way to produce. more airlift capacity sooner.

After re-examining the issue, the general said, the Air Force con- der. cluded that it could double this capacity by 1989 with the new fleet of C-5s and KC-10s. This would be about three years sooner than with the C-17s because no research and development was needed, the production facilities already existed, crews were trained and logistic systems were in place. The Air Force has 77 C-5s and six KC-10s on hand, with 10 more KC-10s on or-

Study of Japanese Men Finds the Socially Isolated Run Greater Risks

The Associated Press
CHARLESTON, S.C. — Social isolation may be hazardous to the heart, according to scientists who say that single men without close friends run two or three times the risk of developing heart disease as their more sociable counterparts.

Social isolation may be as important a risk in the development of heart disease as cigarette smoking, high blood pressure and high cholesterol, according to Leonard Syme, a professor of epidemiology at the University of California at Berkeley.

Speaking Tuesday at a science writers' symposium sponsored by the American Heart Association, Mr. Syme said several other researchers also have found links between social behavior and heart disease.

He said his research began with an attempt to explain why Japanese who have moved to the United States seem to have much higher rates of heart disease than do Japanese in Japan, even when they continue to eat the diet of their native country.

A study of 17,000 Japanese in Japan, Ha-waii and San Francisco showed that those in Japan had the lowest rates of heart disease. Those in Hawaii had a higher rate and those in San Francisco showed a still higher rate of heart disease.

That discovery could not be explained on the basis of changes in diet or differences in such factors as cigarette smoking, high blood pressure and levels of cholesterol in the blood, Mr. Syme said.

Those in California who adopted Western ways had five times the heart disease of those who lived traditionally," Mr. Syme said. Because the traditional Japanese lifestyle is based on strong families and stable social relationships, Mr. Syme and his colleagues tried to discover whether those relationships somehow kept the incidence of heart disease down. The researchers studied a randomly chosen group of 6,928 residents of Alameda County, just east of San Francisco, and found that people with no friends had two to three times the death rate of people with the most friends and social contact.

Further study with the Japanese group showed that isolation - as indicated by marital status, church attendance and group memberships — was closely associated with

Israel Is Said to Warn Of Military Response If Egypt Breaks Pact individual knows but rather that the person

By David K. Shipler New York Times Service

JERUSALEM --- Istael's defense minister, Ariel Sharon, has reportedly made it clear to the United States and Egypt that any Egyp-tian violation of the demilitarized status of Sinai after Israel's withdrawal in April would trigger an Israeli military move into the pen-

In his recent talks with Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. and Egyptian officials in Cairo, Mr. Sharon, a former general who fought in the Sinai, is said to have stopped short of threatening all-out war in such an instance. But he is understood to have explained that Israel would not be satisfied with diplomatic protests if Egyptian troops or tanks moved across the Suez Canal; in that event, Israeli military forces would be sent into the Sinai in the hope that Egypt could be induced to withdraw before warfare erupted.

According to several Israeli officials, Mr. Sharon's purpose in drawing this "red line" was to em-phasize Israel's reliance on the demilitarization of Sinai as a concrete concession that Egypt has made for the return of the peninsu-la, which was first captured by Isished and recaptured in 1967.

'Deep, Deep Anxiety'

"There is a deep, deep anxiety, especially in military circles here, that if the peace treaty goes sour, one of the things that can happen is Egyptian troop movements into Sinai," an official said. "Sinai's demilitarization is one of the most important points of the peace: one of the most concrete things is that Smai will be empty of troops. Otherwise, all we have is a contract."

Under annex one of the peace treaty, signed in March, 1979, the Sinai is to be divided into three zones, each with limits on Egyptian military and police presence.

In Zone A, a band about 35 miles (53 kilometers) wide, east of the canal and the Gulf of Suez, Egypt is restricted to one mecha-uized infantry division, including three mechanized infantry brigades, one armored brigade, seven field artillery battalions and up to 126 artillery pieces, 230 tanks, sev-en antiaircraft battalions with surface-to-air missiles. 126 anti-aircraft guns and 480 armored personnel vehicles. A ceiling of 22,000 personnel is set in this area.

Zone B. a wide band down the peninsula's center, is restricted to Egyptian border units of four battalions with light weapons and wheeled, not tracked, vehicles. A maximum of 4,000 personnel is permitted,

Zone C, along the Israeli border. is to be open to Egyptian civilian police and the multinational peacekeeping force. No Egyptian military is permitted, and the two Israeli-built air bases in it are to be used only by civilian aircraft

Assassination Problem

The emphasis placed by Mr. Sharon on these limits reflects the rising anxiety in Israel as it approaches the April 25 date for relinquishing the remaining one-third of the Sinai.

After President Anwar Sadat's assassination and amid protests by militant Jewish settlers who want to hold the Sinai, acute nervousness is being expressed, even among government officials, about Egypt's ultimate intentions following the April withdrawal.
In addition, officials are anxious that Washington understand the limits of Israeli tolerance of any Egyptian infractions, since the United States is seen as the guarantor of the treaty.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin, Mr. Sharon and other officials have said repeatedly that Israel will keep its commitment to withdraw. But lesser figures in the government are urging a review of the pledge. Rabbi Haim Druckman. deputy minister of religious affairs and a member of the National Religious Party, is now in the United States, leading a group campaign-ing against the withdrawal.

The opponents' main argument is that Egypt cannot be trusted. and the settlers' resistance is expected to make their evacuation disorderly, perhaps violent. Some believe they must put up a show of fierce resistance to make the pullback appear to the world as a painful, traumatic step for Israel, a way of demonstrating how difficult it would be for a similar withdrawal from the West Bank, for example.

According to Israelis and Americans who have spoken recently with Egyptian officials, there is no evidence that Cairo is preparing to subvert the peace treaty.

On the contrary, President Hosni Mubarak has often expressed his commitment to its pro-visions, and analysts here tend to believe that if his government stays in power, there will be no immediate change. Egypt is militarily weak compared with Israel and would be no match for an Israeli

International Herald Tribune
MADRID — A bomb exploded at the construction site of a nuclear power plant at Lemoniz, near the northern city of Bilbao, in March of 1978, the first major at-tack carried out by the Marxist-Leninist Basque separatist organization ETA (Basque Homeland and Liberty). The explosion, which killed two workmen, was destined to make the power station one of vested in the project, the owners face new administrative delays now that the Lemoniz plant is nearing completion at last.

The Basque regional government, which is walking a tightrope between the kind of pro-independence sentiments that keep the secessionist ETA alive and the conservative policies of the region's ruling Basque Nationalist Party, at first fought and won a battle in the regional parliament in favor of the nuclear plant. months ago, when the question first came up. The premier's opinion was that any plan to subject major energy policy decisions to the referendum process was out of the question.

The government decided at a Cabinet meeting here Jan. 15 to turn down the request for a referendum and negotiations be-tween the regional and national governments on the Lemoniz question were scheduled to resume after being interrupted in December

Apart from the direct investment at Lemouiz, the amount which Iberduero has had to spend in order to build the power station has been enormous.

For most of last year, work was halted at Lemoniz after the killing of the chief construction engineer, José Maria Ryan. Following that murder, it was a long time before the company could convince workers to get back on the job. ETA threatened to kill anyone who took Mr. Ryan's place. That delay reportedly cost the company $357

As 1981 ended, Lemoniz was causing such a drain on the company that its board of directors reacted to the Basque government's warning that further delays would oblige the company to make decisions "in the interest of the shareholders and employees." It was clear by that time that the Lemoniz project would be a liability un-less it could benefit from ample government intervention.

There was speculation that the company's warning meant that it was ready to cut its losses by sell-

Their Thermolactyl styles were introduced in Europe 25 years ago and have been sold in this country for 12 years. Damart currently outfits climbing Olympic hobsledders, and several U.S. football teams.

The Thermolactyl women's shp, which originated in Europe, is starting to sell so well in the United States the company is about to introduce camisoles, half slips and nightgowns in the same synthetic.

Jeffery Pinkard, specialist in warm underwear at Washington's Eddie Baner store, finds little difference in the several brands of synthetic underwear the store sells. Wool also wicks moisture away from the skin, although not as well as synthetics, according to Hamlet. Wool undergarments were, of course, standard winter gear be-fore central heating, and there are still many women who will never give up their "wooles." With the energy crisis and lower inside temperatures, underwear -- of some variety - has become essential for many men and women. Wool is most people's concept of warm underwear," says Sandra Goldenberg of Hanro, whose fac-tories in Switzerland make some of the finest silk, cotton and woolknit underwear. It is also less expensive than silk. Silk underwear, however, is growing more popular because of its luxurious feel and lack of bulk. Goldenberg considers silk warmer than wool, "but it really all depends on the layering one does."

A 'Superb' Saint Laurent Show

By Hebe Dorsey

ad Herald Tribus PARIS — Paris was drowning in fashion nostalgia Wednesday, what with Yves Saint Laurent celebrating his house's 20th anniversary in the morning. Hubert de Givenchy his 30th in the afternoon and French Vogue marking 50 years of lashion photography with an exhibition at the Musee Jacquemant André.

The morning saw about 700 people packed in the gilded Napoleon III salon of the Intercontinental Hotel and breaking loose at the end into a standing ovation for Saint Laurent. Everybody was there, from fashion empress Diana Vreeland - who flew in from New York and declared the collection "superb" to Lord Snowdon (covering for British Vogue), who did not enjoy being the most photographed photographer. This was not his first time at Saint Laurent's, but it might well be the last one, he said, with a pained look at his colleagues flashes.

In the supercharged atmosphere of a first-class premiere (courtesy of manager Pierre Berge, who also happens to own a theater), the audience was waiting to see what Saint Laurent was going to do. But, deep down, they were prepared to love it, not only because of his 20 years of peerless contribution to fashion, but because he has become something of a cult figure.

Against an altarlike backdrop of white orchids and callas, in an almost religious silence, Saint Laurent became the high priest of fashion, talking to Saint Laurent, with everybody listening in and loving it.

What they loved best was that he seems to be the eternal winner, the most French of all French designers, with the innate tact, restraint and sense of proportions that is known, for lack of a better word, as style. From the moment the show opened, it was clear that, once more, Saint Laurent was going to leave every other designer well behind.

Though he had said he would only parade his main themes, he did add a new garment — the spencer suit that is sure to become his next best seller. Young and pretty, it is a very short, pointed jacket similar to what stewards wear on chic liners. Saint Laurent opened with a black one over black-and-white checked pants, then over a very short skirt (all skirts are well above the knees), and added several variants, including sharp orange (Paloma Picasso's favorite) and hard blue. The evening spencer suit was black, with black or white satin lapels. All were worn with high heels, and camisoles of tucked chiffon, white pique or silvery sequins. Despite the occasional touches of color, it was clear that, for Saint Laurent, black is beautiful but black and white is even better. The little boater hats, white camelias in the back of chignons, and gold belts and buttons, were homage to Chanel, whom Saint Laurent has always loved. So were a long string of black little dresses, with crisp white collars and cuffs. The other Saint Laurent themes were there — timics over short black skirts, four-pocketed safari jackets, pristine shirtwaist dresses, rajah suits and sexy tutu dresses. The most attractive evening look was the draped satin sheaths caught at the hips with hage plaques of fake diamonds or rubies, and worn with Art

Deco diamond bangles. A man with an uncanny sense of what women will want next, Saint Laurent - who knows that the best parties are now being given at home — delivered splen-did at-home outfits: simple blouses worn with elaborate skirts encrusted with colorful patchwork.

Chic too, but more sedate, Givenchy also packed them in, between in the gilt walls of the Grand Hotel - same Napoleon III vintage. But whereas Saint Laurent comes across as everybody's designer (that is, given the right body and pocketbook) Givenchy is more remote, with a certain arrogance that only the very rich can put up with. For him, too, it was remembrances of things past — as well as updating past successes. So he had the new chemise, the long sophisticated blouson and the new evening look — a romantic, rutfled story harking back to the days when Andrey Hepburn was starring in "Sabrina" and "Breakfast at Tiffany's."

Max's influence on the legitimate theater was probably greater than that of any other music hall comedian of the day. Laurence Olivier and Kenneth

Tynan were among the first to mourn his death in 1963, both remarking that in a time of increasing mechanization Max was one of the last to live really dangerously on stage. As he used to say, "There'll never be another. When I'm dead and gone, lady, this

Max has been dead and gone for the best part of 20 years, and the music hall game is indeed long over; but now, to the stage of the Forume Theatre, comes "Here's a Funny Thing," a semi-solo show written by R.W. Shakespeare (No. lady, not that Bill Shakespeare) in which John Barndon, aided only by a somewhat recalcitrant pianist, attempts to bring Max back to the boards. Physically the resemblance is not that great, but then, if Barndon is not in real life much like Max Miller, neither was Max Mil-

He was born Thomas Henry Sargent in the slums of Brighton in November, 1895, acquiring his new name after his wife saw a Max Factor poster on the back of a bus. And though the gaudy splendor of the white trilby and the flowered suit was to become his stagemark, the real Max was much more like the rather down-at-heel old trouper we meet in the first act here, clutching his sandwiches and cursing Val Parnell.

Parnell, it will be recalled, was the Palladium manager who, hav-ing allowed Jack Benny to do 15 minutes during a 1950 Royal Variety Show, tried to haul Miller off after a mere five. Treating this as an affront to his patriotism rather than his professionalism, Miller stayed on to do the full 15; backstage afterward, a livid Parnell told him he would never work the Palladium again. "Mr. Parnell," said Miller, "you are ten years and £200,000 too late." He had made his fortune, and was happy to retire on it to Brighton - except, of course, that public demand brought him back to the Palladium for a triumphal farewell two years

Contrary to popular belief (including Osborne's), Miller was not Jewish, and his humor was rooted instead in a kind of hard-edged neutrality. At a time of predominantly northern comics he was a southerner, and at a time of fundamentally cosy entertainment he was ruthless, waspish, invulnerable and very funny. In the course of an eccentric career he once filmed with Gielgud (in "The Good Companions") and topped the bill at every palace of varieties in the land. He was a seaside postcard brought to life, a stick of Brighton rock made flesh, and to see him whole you had to see him live.

Barndon manages, in the second half, an adequate impression and, in the first half, a sketchy stage biography. I'm inclined to wish he had developed the first half further, for it is there that we begin to see the contrasts between Thomas Henry Sargent and Max Miller at their most interesting.

When "The Sound of Music" opened at the Apollo Victoria last August, I was careful to arrange my summer holiday so as to avoid A thin, not to say skeletal, week for new productions, coupled with the inescapable fact that the tills are still alive with the sound of singing nums and Petula Clark, has, however, forced me belatedly toward that bizarre entertainment, and I have to report that it is not nearly as bad as I had feared. On the contrary, it is a great deal

The show is the most schmalzily objectionable of all the Rodgers and Hammerstein musical collaborations: in almost every other, the seedy comball sentimentality of Rodgers' music was counteracted to some extent by the icier urban intelligence of Hammerstein, who was to become Sondheim's great tutor and friend. But by the time (1959) of "The Sound of Music," Hammerstein was dying of cancer and the show painfully reflects his weakness. Instead of the chilly brilliance of a lyric like "You Have to Be Carefully Taught" ("South Pacific," 1949), we get references to "larks who are learning to pray" presumably in some com aviary and seminary. It is fractionally to the credit of Petula Clark that she manages to get through the show without breaking into fits of uncontrollable giggles, something I have to admit I failed to do. Michael Jayston, playing von Trapp, has the grace to look deeply embarrassed even when not required to sing. Only Honor Blackman as the countess truly gets away with the evening, largely because she sensibly behaves like royalty opening some peculiarly underprivileged church

It is, I fear, a collector's evening, not least because it has been staged in a cinema where the stage apparently allows for only two nds of choreography - the kind where you line the cast up in a straight footlights row from left to right according to height, and the kind where you let them move very slowly either off or onto the stage.

It would be nice to think that this production, which manages to be simultaneously tacky and extravagant, rather like the Tower of London reconstructed in marsh-mallow, would put an end to the current London theatrical vogue for reviving very old musicals very badly, but if you believe that, you doubtless have already enrolled your lark in a religious training es-tablishment.

Moviemaker Will Complete Natalie Wood's Last Film

The Associated Press

HOLLYWOOD — The science-fiction movie "Brainstorm," which Natalie Wood was filming when she died, will be completed, according to production director Jack Grossberg. The filming of the $12.5-million picture was suspended after Wood drowned Nov. 29 off Santa Catalina Island, where she had been cruising with her husband, actor Robert Wagner, and actor Christopher Walken, who also stars in the film. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer had discussed the possibility of shelving the film, much of which was shot in North Carolina. But Grossberg said

Tuesday that production will resume Feb. 8 with all further filming in Wood was scheduled for only three more days of shooting, but her remaining scenes were said to be among the most important in the film. Ira David Wood, a Raleigh, N.C., actor-director who plays Natalie Wood's lover in the movie, said studio executives decided to resume production when director Douglas Trumbull convinced the studio he had enough footage of the actress to complete the film. "Brainstorm" is a story about a research scientist, played by Walken, who invents a device that transmits emotions and thoughts from one person to another. MGM expects most of the remaining photography to be completed within 17 days after production resumes, said Paula Wyrick of the film office of the North Carolina Department of Commerce. The premiere is tentatively scheduled for next Christmas, she added.

The State of the Union

In his first State of the Union address, President Reagan proposed a fundamental shift in the division of responsibility between federal and state governments. The issue here is the degree of local and regional variation in its basic social and civic standards that the United States considers proper.

Mr. Reagan's plan appears to invite retrogression toward far wider inequities among states, with a massive withdrawal of federal authority and federal standards. He is correct in saying that the present webbing of rules drawn up in Washington, and the manifold conditions attached to the money sent from Washington, are sometimes inefficient and frequently annoying to state officials. But that is hardly the whole reality of the relationship, or even the greater part of it.

To form a balanced judgment on this dubious plan, it is useful to recall the United States of a generation ago and the enormous disparities tolerated then between the standards of social protection in the poor states and the rich ones - or the generous ones. Many of those disparities have been greatly mitigated over the past several decades. In some considerable part it is the result of the great mobility of the American population. and the national development of the economy. But one crucial part of the explanation is the many kinds of federal money sent into the states with many kinds of federal requirements for the services that it supported.

Mr. Reagan does not think that a reversion to the practices of the bad old days would be a danger. With reforms like reapportionment and the Voting Rights Act, he said, community practices will genuinely represent community ideas of decency and good sense. In these matters, Mr. Reagan tends to think in terms of the very creditable example of California, which has been a leader among the states in its concern for its citizens.

But what about Texas, recently become quite rich and yet remaining remarkably mean in its treatment of the poor? Texas currently provides an indigent family of four the princely sum of $140 a month to live on. If there is no longer to be any federal money in, say, food stamps, the federal government is going to have trouble enforcing any limits on a state's inclination to cut back on them.

The case for national standards is both practical and moral. It would be grotesque to invite those states with a tradition of social conscience to take disproportionate burdens of the nation's poverty as helpiess people fled to them from the penury of the less generous.

There's a direct connection betwen poverty and bad health. Is it not strange to argue, as the Reagan plan does, that health programs are inherently a federal responsibility but poverty is not? It is also quite true that the resources of this country are not spread equally across the 50 states. Some have much greater capacity than others to support social welfare and education. It is not at all clear that this new definition of federalism will actually lead to any real simplification of government. It can save money only through a general decline of standards. It hardly seems to lead, however, toward anything like a more perfect union.

Mikhail A. Suslov

Mikhail Suslov, the veteran Soviet politician who died (peacefully) on Monday at age 79, had, we suspect, a "dirty little secret." He was known as the Kremlin's chief ideologist, but this was a mask. He believed in power, the power of a self-appointed Communist Party elite. And why not? The party took him off the farm, educated him in its fashion, gave him work --- he was hip-deep in the purges of the 1930s — gave him high office (the Central Committee from 1941, the Politburo from 1952) and then dignified as ideology the crude strictures he laid down to a succession of challengers of Kremlin orthodoxy: the Yugoslavs, the Chinese, Soviet dissidents, most recently the Poles.

Tall for a Russian, gaunt in visage, a familiar gray eminence hovering at the elbow of his better known peers for more than three decades, Mr. Suslov certainly looked the part of chief ideologist. But he was really something else: a diligent hatchet man, always ready to belabor the victim of the moment. He had to be something else for, by nearly universal account, ideology is a hollow force in his country, an object of neglect and contempt. No one could have sustained a highflying career like his if he were held responsible for popular belief.

What, then, did Mikhail Suslov believe? What beliefs do stir or at least bind the tiny handful of people who rule the Soviet Union in the name of Communist ideology?

The permutations of faith in power are, of course, considerable. But perhaps the shrewd and durable Mikhail Suslov had an extra

In the multi-ethnic Soviet Union, he was one of the few Politburo members entirely of the politically dominant Great Russian strain. It began to be noticed a while back that he was invariably the first person on the reviewing stand to rise for the national anthem. For some years observers have seen the Kremlin shading in theme and symbol from a reliance on revolutionary ideology to a reliance on a traditional, muscular, illiberal, ethnocentric Russian nationalism. So much for the Kremlin's chief ideologist.

Wasting Time

All day long, in game arcades and in front of the living room TV, millions of children fire off laser cannon till their trigger thumbs grow numb. Some play Defenders, Space Fury, Pac-Man and similar electronic games for hours on end. Time magazine estimates that in 1981, arcade players alone used up 75,000 man-years and 20 billion quarters. But their intensity is nothing compared with the mounting opposition. Moralists are on the march.

Say what you will about improving eyehand coordination or learning about computers, no obvious benefit results from all those hours in front of the tube. The games are, in fact, addictive, as some fathers we know have discovered firsthand. But neither is there any obvious harm — which makes the opposition all the more worth pondering.

A New York woman, who is campaigning relentlessly for legal barriers, insists, "These games are corrupting our youth." Towns in New York, New Hampshire, California and Florida have passed ordinances to restrict teen-age use of the machines. The controversy over the lone law, passed by Mesquite, Tex., has worked its way clear up to the United States Supreme Court.

What is the electronic evil these crusaders fear? Gambling? There is none in the video games. Unwholesome surroundings? Implausible. Kids do not routinely go to pool halls to play, and as even critics complain, the games are now found in every pizza parlor and theater lobby. A waste of money? More plausible, particularly when the machines swallow up the kids' lunch money.

But these objections may all be rationalizations. What bugs many parents even more than a waste of money is to see their children

That is not, however, a sin original to video games. Some of us can still tell you what S-H-A-Z-A-M stood for in Captain Marvel stories. (If you must know, Solomon, Hercules, Atlas, Zeus, Archilles and Mercury.) Our parents lectured us about wasting time reading comic books. Others can remember flipping baseball cards or dressing storybook dolls. They, too, have heard the refrain: "Why not read a good book instead of wasting all that time?"

The children of an earlier generation probably heard the same thing when found reading "Captain Billy's Whiz-Bang." The children of a later generation hear it when they sit transfixed by television soap operas.

However virtuous their intent, the critics seem slow to recognize that crusading against time wasters like video games is futile. There is one skill that children of every generation master, a skill that only adults describe as wasting time. With or without video games, wasting time is a part, a good part, of what childhood is all about.

Rebirth of Euro-Communism

Polemical counterbombardment between Communists in Moscow and Communists in Rome has been so intense that any lingering doubts as to whether the split over Poland was for real must be settled forever. All this is interesting enough for students of Moscow's relations with the rest of world Communism. More important in the medium term for European politics is whether this act of defiance toward Moscow will give a new lease of life to the concept of Euro-Communism as practiced in Italy.

NEW YORK - Nothing in the fields of art or ethics has ever stirred this city as it has been stirred by the "Salome" episode - by the action of the Metropolitan Opera and Real Estate Company objecting to further performances of the Strauss-Wilde opera by the Conried Opera Company. Many sermons are being preached on the sacrilege and immorality of the performance and it is declared in some quarters that the theme as handled by author and composer is one that should not be touched upon outside of works by Professor Krafft-Ebbing and other specialists on paranoia. But musicians are disposed to rally around Mr. Conried because of the genius recognized in the Strauss music.

1932: Depression Legislation

WASHINGTON - President Hoover has signed the $500-million appropriation bill for the initial subscription to the $2-billion Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the keystone arch in his economic program to lift American business from the rut of depression. The president denied European rumors that the United States was inclining toward inflation through a creation of the corporation. He took a firm stand against any currency expansion, but he favored broadening the rediscount powers of the Federal Reserve banks to liberalize credit. Scores of applications already have been received at the Treasury Department for loans from the new Reconstruction Corporation.

Do 'Plumbers' Deserve a Chance . . .

By Stansfield Turner

WASHINGTON — President Reagan has established new controls to curtail leaks of classified government information. The White House ordered officials throughout the government to get clearance before talking with reporters about national-security matters. And Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger is instituting lie-detector tests to ferret out

The various news media are not providing the public a balanced re-sponse to these commendable efforts. They are telling us that inhi-bitions on public servants will re-sult in a less-well-informed press and hence a less-well-informed public, that no such system of controls has ever worked anyway, and that the government will continue to leak when it wants to for its own advantages.

What is missing is a discussion of the damage done through unau-thorized leaks.

First, there is the endangering of our sources of intelligence infor-mation. We may spend billions of dollars developing a new technical system for collecting data, then give away the secret for countering it. We may endanger the life of a foreign agent who is taking risks at our request and on our behalf. Perhaps, even more important, by lessening confidence in our ability to protect our agents we reduce the probability that we will be able to recruit the agents today whom we will need in the future.

Handicap

Second, we do direct damage to our foreign policy, and our mili-tary readiness, by tipping our hand or describing our capabilities. Perhaps the most significant element here is that we are often denied oportunities to take foreign-policy initiatives just because the risk of a leak is so high.

In my opinion, one of the key reasons that the hostage-rescue raid into Iran did not succeed was the perceived necessity for extreme asures to prevent leaks during the planing process. Even at that, the fact that an action of some sort was under way with respect to the hostages was beginning to be perceived by reporters by the time the raid took place.

Leaks of security information are the single most serious handicap to our foreign policy within our government. Certainly, leaks are the greatest problem that our intelligence agencies face.

Most presidents have had to face this issue. Some have made valiant attempts to control leaks, and some of those attempts have been unlawful. President Reagan's approach is certainly neither doomed to failure nor unlawful. He deserves a trial period to demonstrate that his new controls will not be abused by overclassification or by selective leaks.

One reason it is worth giving the president's plan a try is that the dangers of controls are being grossly exaggerated. What do leaks accomplish for our country? They often simply advance the time at which the public will be informed and, in so doing, preempt or de-stroy a foreign-policy initiative. Or they release some detail of classi-fied data that is well beyond the interest or comprehension of the

I wrote to the editors and complained that the American public hardly needed the specifics in this instance, and that lives might be at stake. Both editors responded that it was their duty to publish such information despite its irrelevance to informing our public.

The principal argument for not discouraging the illegal practice of leaking is that someone will uncover another Watergate by this means. That is a risk, but would a For instance, when our hostages set of controls such as the presi-were being held in Iran, there were dent has established dissuade ei-

Bob Woodward and Carl Bern-stein provided a valuable public service through their reporting for The Washington Post, but the popularity of investigative reporting, and of whistle-blowing, has risen too high. There is little question that the public interest today lies on the side of curbing the excesses of unauthorized leaks to which we have subjected ourselves. Let's give the president's plan a fair trial and Washington — Official Washington is currently suffering from one of its periodic outbreaks of leakomania. As always, because the problem has been exaggerated, the solution has become the problem.

More than a score of administration officials have been humiliated by the Carlucci Chastity Test. lie-detection examination, which demeans both giver and taker, is designed not so much to discover who leaked national security secrets but to intimidate any government official who dares to reveal or help avoid potential political embarrassments.

The CCT is the brainwashing child of Frank Carlucci, who has long been to Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger what Frank Nitti was to Al Capone — a permanent underboss, an enforcer of that combination of lockjaw and lockstep that helps insiders combat their insecurities. It is the first priority of the new NSC chief, "Judge" Clark

With all due piety, the crack-down on internal dissent is being conducted in the name of national security. People on the inside often confuse national security with memos routinely stamped "secret." They equate the secrets that pro-tect the nation (location of deterrents, and the methods the CIA uses to learn what is happening in Tripoli) with the secrecy that endangers the nation by cloaking the development of policy. Much secrecy, like much welfare, is not directed to the truly needy.

Self-hypnosis then begins, as sycophants begin to extend the president's righteous worry about genuine security leaks with his irritation at seeing the contents of his State of the Union address in print before he delivers it. When Reagan began his bimonthly news conference last week with a crack about leaks, he was kidding - but he wasn't kidding.

Spirit Returns

When Lyndon Johnson became enraged at leaks, he would change his mind so as to make the leaks inaccurate — and thus was con-trolled by leakers. When Richard Nixon caught leakomania, he launched the plumbers operation in Room 16 of the Executive Office Building. I went past that basement office the other day. The room number has been removed, but the spirit may be coming back.

The Frustration of Denazification

By Tom Bower

L ONDON — Tens of thousands of government documents recently released in Washington and London prove conclusively that, despite presidential directives, Germany was not as denazified af-ter World War II as public opinion believed. Equally disconcerting, the documents show that a disturbingly large number of German war criminals remained unprosecuted and impunished by the Al-lies and settled down to comfort-able lives in western Germany.

On Oct. 25, 1942, President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill issued their first major statement on Nazi war crimes and "Retribution for these crimes," promised Churchill, "must henceforth take its place among the major purposes of the war."

On the face of it, this and later, more detailed declarations could leave no doubt that Allied policy after the war was to hunt down and prosecute those who had masterminded and carried out the coldblooded murder of more than 12 million innocent people.

The recently released government documents show, however, that these pledges were willfully and cynically betrayed by those charged with their implementation and that the British were by far the worst offenders.

Futile Deaths

Their casual and more lenient attitude toward the Nazis effectively undermined those U.S. officials who idealistically attempted to fulfill the wartime promises.

To their anger, the Americans discovered that wanted Nazis had found comfortable sanctuary in the neighboring British zone. Contrary to the self-delusory and harmful myth that tens of thousands of Nazi war criminals fled to South America, unpalatable evidence is now available to show that the majority of the wanted men were the intended beneficiaries of an officially sanctioned blind eye to murder.

The only difference between Warsaw and Rome is that the Kremlin cannot send its tanks to the Eternal City, only the prose of its faithful Pravda.

The Dec. 13 putsch in Warsaw that did away with Solidarity also triggered the coup de grace to what was still being called Euro-Com-munism, which was the notion that Communism and democracy were compatible.

Aiready badly shaken by the divisions within its movement after the Soviet interventions in Cambo-dia and Afghanistan, Euro-Com-munism could not survive the Warsaw coup. And at the same time, the basic dogma of all Com-munism — the dictatorship of the proletariat — died in Poland. The proletariat is imprisoned there so the dictatorship can rule without hindrance.

The excommunication of the Italian Communist Party is not the end but the beginning of a series of events that may be considered the third schism of the modern Communist movement.

Ideological

But the denunciations of Tito in 1948 and Mao in 1961 were provoked by rejection of Moscow's political domination, and without raising the slightest doubt as to the value of the Soviet system as a model. This time, however, the divorce is ideological. The Italian Communist Party has formally re-jected "real Socialism" as a model.

If Moscow's reaction to the Italian party's analysis was inevitable, the violence of the Pravda article came as a surprise. And that in itself is unusual because Pravda reached into its glossary of extraordinary terms and used the language of the preceding schisms, those always followed by a di-

The Italian party has taken a daring step in disputing Moscow's privileged position in the world and in history. And Moscow is making it clear that it is prepared to pay the price to let it be known that it considers this step intoler-

And the cost of a break with the biggest Communist party in the Western world may well be a domino effect on the Spanish and Finnish parties, of condemnation by the Japanese, Dutch and British Communists, and of striking at the heart of the international pacifist movement, currently silenced by the Polish putsch.

Embarrassment

The French Communists participate in a government led by the Socialist Party, which has been the most virulent critic of dictatorships throughout the world - this despite the embarrassing affair of the gas deal with the Soviet Union. And the Socialists will not allow the four Communist ministers in the French government to remain silent over the Soviet violation of international relations and democratic procedures in the Kremlin's attack on the Italian party. But what sort of links can exist between the French and Italian Communist Parties, when the Communist-led French labor federation CGT constantly assails the Polish union Solidarity, while the Italian union CGIL, presided over by Luciano Lama, a member of the Communist Party, announces that it will finance the activities of the clandestine sector of Solidarity in Poland?

The timing of the Prayde article, also was significant. The attuck on Tito in 1948 signaled the start of a campaign that led to the Staliniza-tion of Eastern Europe and to the Korean War. The attack on Mao in 1961 was followed by the Cuban missile crisis and the construction of the Berlin Wall.

A crisis among the Communists and its subsequent ideological and fraternal cold war have always been harbingers of an international cold

"How many Italian workers long for a type of society, of eco-nomic and political order such as exist in the Soviet Union?" the secretary general of the Italian party. Enrico Berlinguer, asked members of his Central Committee who criticized his attitude toward the events in Poland.

That question may be asked throughout Europe, and not only of Communists. And it is too bad that Lech Walesa cannot hear it, since he and the 10 million members of Solidarity were asking just that for 18 months.

Israeli Settlers Waiting

SHARM EL SHEIKH, Israeli-Occupied Sinai — Yellowish clouds of thick dust billow over a desert plateau overlooking the Red Sea's narrow Straits of Tiran and the Saudi Arabian coastline as giant earth-moving machines race against the clock to complete a base for the multinational peacekeeping force that will patrol the Sinai Peninsula after Israel's withdrawal.

Along the road that runs 140 miles (225 kilometers) from the southeastern tip of the Sinai to the port of Elath, at the northern edge of the Gulf of Aqaba, Israeli Army flatbed trucks lumber through the imposing mountain passes, straining under the load of dismantled buildings being transported to the Negev Desert.

In sun-drenched stucco houses in the settlement town of Ophira, moving cartons are stacked to the ceilings, putting the lie to spray-painted graffith outside that defiantly rejects

Just 12 years after the late Israeli war hero and statesman, Moshe Dayan, proclaimed "Better Sharm el Sheikh without peace than peace without Sharm el Sheikh," Israel is taking leave of the most idyllic part of the wedged-shaped 23,622-square-mile peninsula that it has occupied since the Six-Day War of June, 1967.

While in Yamit and other settlements along the northern Sinai's Mediterranean coastline ultranationalist holdouts are saying they will refuse to leave, life here is quietly but sadly

$17-Billion Investment

Israel's $17-billion investment in a new frontier - a gamble predicated on the belief that then-hostile Egypt could never bring itself to make peace with the Jewish state — is being abandoned in the last and most painful retreat since the signing of the peace treaty on March 26, 1979.

"It's all over," said Yaacov Bar-Levy, 34-year-old manager of an Ophira youth hostel and head of the Sharm el Shcikh area settlers committee. "We're just waiting until our school closes on March 26, and then we'll go away with our dreams and our disappointments."

He added: "What Israel doesn't need is a war of Jews against Jews. OK, we live in a democracy. But if this democracy goes to an active resistance, I will oppose that. Most people here are just waiting until the end."

The end, officially, will be April 25, the deadline for the completion of Israel's withdrawal from the Sinai under the terms of the treaty. But for many, it will come sooner than that, and

Some residents say they will date the end from Feb. 10, when Israel's Ministry of Communications will literally pull the plug on the southern Sinai, cutting telephone service except for a few emergency lines beamed by radio transmitters.

A Smell of Death

For the resort hotels and holiday villages along the Gulf of Aqaba, where superb beaches and some of the best diving reefs north of the equator used to attract thousands of visitors a month, the end will probably be March 31, which is when the hotel staffs have been told to

But the southeast Sinai coast already has the smell of death in places.

The holiday village of Neviot, halfway between Elath and here, has already closed, and the only signs of life on the beach these days are backpacking European youths and a few bedown who hang around looking for day work or trying to sell seashell necklaces to the few

At the adjacent settlement farm, the last crop of melons has been harvested, and the remains of this season's flowers are being cut for export to Europe.

"People here are realistic," said Allon Emmanuel, the 33-year-old Neviot manager, who settled in the village in 1972. "We don't live in a fantasy world like they do in Yamit. We know we can't stay. We know the peace process is like a buildozer, moving along slowly without anything strong enough to change it. All the little controversies about not leaving are irrelevant. The fact is the arm leaving."

without anything choice described to the control of Ophira, the 130-room marina hotel has all but been taken over by American construction workers from the nearby multinational base, and in town a clifftop motel has been turned into a dormitory for 150 migrant construction workers from Thailand who are also working on the base.

The multinational force's new headquarters, which will house 1,000 members, is about the

Enormous Operation

In pulling back from the Sinai, the largest logistical operation ever by Israel, the Israeli Army has abandoned three major air bases and has evacuated 103 infantry and armored corps camps. The job has entailed transporting 3,500 buildings, shipping 8,700 tons of equipment and dismantling 150 miles of water pipeline. Any military equipment the army cannot move will be destroyed.

The Israeli government says that in 14 years, it invested $17 billion in the Sinai, including $10 billion for air bases and army facilities, $5 billion in developing the Alma oil fields along the Gulf of Suez, and $2 billion for settlements and roads. Additionally, the cost of redeploying the air force and army in the Negev has cost $4.4 billion, plus another $1 billion paid by the United States for construction of two new air bases in the Negev.

But an even larger cost, according to many of the 5,000 Israelis who moved to the Sinai to

To Jacki Ben-Margi, of Ophira, everything he sees in the southern Sinai looks like death.

Washington Post Service
WASHINGTON — The Reagan program is still playing in Party Program VV is still playing in Peoria. It is more than a little off key, with unemployment higher than most adults can ever remember. But they are not ready to shoot the piano player or even demand that he change his tune. They want to hear how the piece ends.

The conventional wisdom in Washington is that after his first-year legislative triumphs, Ronald Reagan is riding for a fall. The combination of deep recession, high unemployment and an approaching election will weaken his Republican support and embolden the Democratic opposition, it is said. But the conventional wisdom may be wrong. What jobless carpenters, worried Caterpillar Tractor workers and nervous farmers were saying last week in the middle of frozen Illinois was echoed in seven other communities from New Haven to San Marcos, where Washington Post reporters traveled with members of Congress and interviewed their constituents. The Post went mainly to districts that gave Mr. Reagan his 1981 victories: the home bases of conservative and liberal Republicans and conservative Democrats. The idea was to see if that support was being eroded by the economic adversities of this cruel winter.

Indicative Comments

If the sentiments in those communities and the comments of a dozen other House members interviewed by phone are indicative, the mood of the returning Congress may be more more amenable to President Reagan's secondyear program than a look at the recession's bleak measures would suggest.

A lot more people are nervous about what Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., Republican of Tennessee, last year called "the riverboat gamble" of Reaganomics. But they are not yet cashing in their chips. Larry Hobbs is a Houston painter and paperhanger, his wife, Ronda, is expecting their first child. Both were raised as Democrats, but they admire Ronald Reagan. "For the one year he's been in office," she said, "he's done a helluva job." "I'm a union man," her husband added, "but with Carter, it seems that nothing much was accomplished. ... Ronald Reagan is more of a leader." He talks about unemployment and the big deficits and said he knows there are big risks. "He'll either make us or break us," he said of the president." There are pressures in many districts to write off Reaganomics as a failure. Kellar Blair, a black minister's wife in Augusta, Ga., said: "People are desperate. A lot of poor people are suffering and the crime rate is bound to go up." John Driscoll, the president of the Connecticut AFL-CIO, finds "quite a bit of revulsion" with Mr. Reagan. "What turned most working people off," he said, "was the letdown after their first paychecks in October.

There wasn't enough tax cut in them to buy a pack of cigarettes. And in San Marcos, Texas, Ofelia Vasquez, the director of the community action program, pronounced herself "disillusioned." "I think the rich are getting richer," she said. "It was a mistake to cut taxes at the same time they cut the budget. We should cut taxes when we can But the feeling reporters heard most often was expressed by Karren Wolfe, a 39-year-old housewife in Pomona, Calif. Raising eight children on the salary her husband makes as a pump company manager, she acknowledges she got nervous when he talked about the firm's declining orders. But "we just have to hang in there and, hopefully, it will work," she said of the Reagan economic plan. Unemployment and cuts in social services concern her, she said, but "it's better to hurt a few than the whole nation. They should give Reagan a chance to cut inflation, get spending down, get government back where it should That may seem easy for her to say. It is not easy for Morgan Jones of Augusta, Ga. And he says the same thing.

Mr. Jones. 40, watched about 70 fellow employees at Coastal Lumber Co. get dismissal notices for Christmas. Now the company is up for sale and Mr. Jones has to worry about how long he can hold onto his $15,000-a-year sales

Views Are Echoed "It's a strange phenomenon," Mr. Jones' congressman, Rep. Doug Barnard Jr., Democrat of Georgia, said of the many conversations he has had with people who echo Mr. Jones' views. One of the Democrats whose votes gave Mr. Reagan his budget and tax victories in the House last year, Mr. Barnard said he has kept his ear tuned for sounds of rebellion and "no one has told me, 'You botched it up.' " "Most understand it still hasn't gotten under way yet," he said. "And those who supported the program can't be faulted until it's proven a failure."

What is true of this Democrat is also true of

What is true of this Democrat is also true of two Republicans from normally Democratic Youngstown and New Haven, who went home nervous about their support of the president and come back prepared to go a little further

It is true of two freshman Republicans from Texas and California, who beat Democratic incumbents on Mr. Reagan's coattails in 1980 and will be facing the voters on their own this November. They are prepared to roll the dice on the Reagan program, gambling it will pan out politically.

Even the veteran moderate Democrat from Lyndon Johnson's home district, Rep. Jake Pickle, who voted against the 1981 budget and tax cuts, is far from ready to lead a crusade Against Reaganomics. At an Austin high school assembly, early one day, he told the seniors, "I think the administration is going to have to make some crucial decisions. They cannot get our economy back in shape by fol-lowing the course we're on."

try to cooperate by making additional, reasonable cuts. You can't operate like 20 years ago. But I'm not going to try to solve all our problems by cutting social programs."

Such comments give weight to the words of Peoria's congressman, House Minority Leader Robert Michel, Republican of Illinois, who said the second year of Reaganomics will be "more difficult" to push through Congress—

Still later, he told a reporter: "I'm going to but not impossible. Rep. Michel can see the economic problems of the United States in microcosm every time he goes home. Unemployment, pushing 10 per-cent, "is the highest in my lifetime," said May-or Dick Carver, a Republican and Reagan de-fender in the U.S. Conference of Mayors. The Pabst brewery was ordered closed on the last day of 1981, following Hiram Walker's distil-lery out of town. Caterpillar, the biggest em-ployer, had ordered the first large-scale layoffs in 20 years, even before it lost an $80-million significant majority approves the cuts of 1981, and they want more in 1982, if they are within contract to sell pipelayers to the Soviet Union when Mr. Reagan imposed trade sanctions as a protest against the military takeover in Poland. Many of the issues that are at the center of

"I have to be a bit careful," Rep. Michel said, "with unemployment up and Pabsi clos-ing down. I don't subscribe to the notion that unemployment is the only way to attack inflation. But I do say that we are paying the price for the excesses of the past, and you don't turn things around overnight. Come the spring winds of March and April, I want to see things turning around

He is not the only one who measures in months, if not weeks, the tolerance for Reaganomics. Donald A. Johnson, the executive secretary of the West Central Illinois Building Trades Council and the director of labor for former Illinois Gov. Dan Walker, a Democrat, says that his dues-paying membership has dropped from 14,000 in 1980 to 10,000 now because of the depression in construction.

In the back room of Sambo's Restaurant in Little Rock, Ark., four men are having late afternoon coffee. Three voted for Mr. Reagan in 1980 and the fourth would switch to support him now. But they think the economy is lousy. "If it weren't for the government work" at the local Air Force base, said Jimmy Stinson, an electrical contractor, "there wouldn't be anything." "He's not trying to hurt the middle-income people," B.I. Choate, a realtor, said of Mr. Reagan, "but that's what it [his program] is doing right now. "It's tilted toward the wealthy." Warren Shell, owner of a transport firm, agrees, "but he doesn't mean it that way." Willis Sanders, a heating and air-conditioning repairman, said nothing will improve "until his program has a chance to work." Nothing else has helped with inflation," he observed, "but if he fails, we're going to have a

Ed Bethune, the Republican who represents these four men in the House, said that every time he begins to wonder if Mr. Reagan can sustain momentum for his program, "I come out here and they say he's on the right track ... in his effort to change some fundamental attitudes about working, saving and investing. There's a feeling this will ultimately help the economy more than just changing the budget."

'Destined to Fail' But Rep. Bethune worries that the Reagan program is "destined to fail unless it means prosperity for black America as well as white The concern about the fairness of the Reagan program pops up time and again, and not just from critical Democrats. Rep. Lawrence J. DeNardis, Republican of Connecticut, a freshman in what was a Democratic district worries about people like William Elder, a 70-year-old office employee in New Haven, who said, "Reagan has forgotten the days when he worked for $30 a week. He is taking from the poor and giving to the rich; that's all he's doing."

"To the extent that spreads," Rep. De-Nardis said, "I'll be in trouble. But so far, a Rep. Fields sees his mission in simple terms: keep cutting. "We have not cut one dollar from the federal budget," he tells Rotarians. "All we have done is reduce the rate of growth.

meet on Sunday to coordinate prices and production.

Finance ministers of the Gulf Cooperation Council decided in the Saudi capital of Riyadh to set up a Gulf investment corporation with initial capital of $3 billion, the official Qatar news agency said.

They also formed five expert committees to work out details of implementing a wide-ranging economic agreement — along the lines of the European Common Market — that was ratified by their heads of state last November.

Saudi Finance Minister Mohammed Abalkhail said the ministers would meet again in June to endorse the final form of the economic agreement, the official Saudi press agency said.

A council spokesman in Riyadh also announced that oil ministers of the six — Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Oman, Bahrain, Qatar and the United Arab Emirates — would meet on Sunday, their first gathering since the group was formed last May.

The six Gulf states derive virtually all their income of over $400 million a day from oil and produce about 11.5 million barrels per day — half the output of OPEC.

They decided to establish closer links last year in the face of threats they saw from the Soviet intervention in afghanistan, the Iranian revolution and the Iran-Iraq war.

The ministerial meetings began on Monday when defense ministers began two days of talks that covered the establishment of a Gulf armaments industry.

armaments industry.

Kuwaiti Defense Minister Salem al-Sabah said on his return from the defense meeting that it approved proposais of a military team which visited Oman and considered possible defence help for the sultanate.

Greece Moves to Take Over Exxon Interests

ATHENS - In its first major nationalization move since coming to power last October, Greece's Socialist government has announced it will take over the Exxon oil refinery complex near Salonika in northern

A spokesman for Exxon, whose contract with the Greek state for the Salonika plant was due to expire in 1983, said the company expected the takeover negotiations to be "friendly," and he predicted that they would lead to "a smooth handing over of Exxon's activities at the plant to Observers in Athens said the Tuesday announcement was probably welcomed by Exxon, whose profits from the Salonika refinery have been small by international standards. The plant has an annual refining capacity of 3.3 million tons, and the most recent available figures show a profit of approximately $9 million for 1979.

BMW Chief Hints Dividend May Be Reduced

MUNICH — Bayerische Motoren Werke's managing board chairman, Eberhard von Kuenheim, said Wednesday he could not rule out the possibility of a cut in 1981 dividend from the 10 marks per 50 mark share paid on 1980 results.

He told a news conference that 10-Deutsche mark payout by BMW in the last two years was unusually high and "this cannot be a fixed dividend level." Mr. von Kuenheim said the company could not maintain 1980 profit levels in 1981, despite last year being generally a good year for BMW with turnover, production and sales rising to record levels. BMW is to report 1981 results at the end of April.

Spain Firm to Make Suzuki 4-Wheel-Drives

TOKYO - Japan's Suzuki Motor Co. said Wednesday that Land Rover Santana of Spain will make and sell Suzuki's Jimny model, a small, four-wheel drive vehicle.

Suzuki declined to elai-orate on the agreement with land Rover Santana, which is partly owned by British Leyland. But industry sources said suzuki Hoped to enter West European markets through the Spanish

Another Japanese automaker, Isuzu, which is 34-percent owned by General Motors, said it planned to take a 10-percent in venture planned by GM and Tunisia's Société Afrique Autos. The venture will make oneton trucks designed by Isuzu and a van designed by Opel of West Ger-

Bastogi to Cut Holdings, Seek Partners AP-Dow Jones

MILAN — Bastogi, the struggling Italian holding group, said Wednesday it will shed some shareholdings and properties and seek new partners in its subsidiary operations in a bid to restore the company.

"Bastogi isn't any longer a financial holding company, it is a conglomerate," said Chairman Luigi Santamaria. "That means the company can't isolate itself from the good and bad aspects of its subsidiaries and, in times of industrial crisis like the present, it's clear that the situation is damaging to the holding company."

Deepening losses forced the company earlier this month to write down its capital to 92.3 billion lire ($74.6 million) from 171.4 billion lire. Though Bastogi's board said at the time it would try to recapitalize the company, a lack of prospective underwriters has cast doubts on the likelihood of such a strategy.

Alusuisse Says 1982 Will Be 'Terrible'

ZURICH — Swiss Aluminum Ltd, will have "a terrible year in 1982," Thomas Gasser, executive vice president and chief financial officer, said

He strongly hinted that the dividend, currently 10 percent a share, will be slashed. He said planned major investments will be postponed, but added that low inventories could speed up an eventual rebound in busi-

Effect of Trade Law Changes Will Be Slow, Says Suzuki

- Plans to drop nontarrif trade barriers and open the Japanese market to more foreign goods will not have any immediate impact, Premier Zenko Suzuki said

At the same time the head of Ja-pan's central bank said there are unmistakable signs that Japanese exports as a whole have been slowing, affecting the economic out-look of the nation to some extent.

Premier Suzuki told reporters that the effect of removing at least 67 out of 99 nontariff barriers cited by the United States and the European Economic Community would be gradual. But he called on the United States and Europe to boost sales efforts in Japan.

Japan is under pressure from its major trading partners to cut its huge trade surpluses. According to recent forecasts, Japan could have a $20-billion surplus in U.S. trade and a $15-billion advantage with the EEC in the current financial year ending in March. Bank of Japan Governor Haruo Maekawa said Wednesday that the slowdown in exports has been due to voluntary controls of exports by Japanese industries and increased overseas inventories of Japanese goods reflecting recession in the United States and other Western

Mr. Maekawa said, however, it is difficult at this stage to forecast the future trend of Japanese exports. However, inventory adjust-ment by Japanese industries has been completed, which is a favorable factor for the further development of the economy, he said.

U.S. Reports Chinese Purchased More Wheat

WASHINGTON — China has bought an additional 130,000 metric tons of U.S. wheat — about 4.8 million bushels — for delivery this year, the Agriculture Department reported.

Officials said Tuesday the grain had been reported earlier as going to "unknown destinations" but that exporters now indicate it was bought by China. The latest sales raised to more than 3.2 million tons of wheat that China has bought for delivery in 1982. China has ageed to buy a minimum of 6' million tons of U.S. grain this year.

Russia Selling Large Volumes Of Heating Oil

LONDON - The Soviet Union is offering an unprecedented number of cargoes of light heating oil on the spot market, apparently motivated by a strong need to earn foreign exchange, oil trade sources said Wednesday.

This development, which is conrins development, which is con-tributing to a sharp decline in oil product prices, follows reports of higher sales of gold by the Soviet Union on the world market. One source said that over the last two weeks more than 200,000 metric tons of Soviet heating oil have appeared in the market. Other estimates put the total as high as 300,000-400,000 tons.

Contracts from the Soviet Union generally run from April to December and deliveries during January and February are most unusual, analysts claim

Some suggest that the country has been forced to sell fuel that it would normally use for internal consumption because of its high foreign currency requirements.

Following a series of poor har-vests over the last two years, the Soviet Union has had to resort to importing vast quantities of grain. Estimates of the country's requirements during 1982 range between 40 and 50 million metric tons, all of which will have to be paid for in foreign currency.

In addition, some analysts be-lieve the Soviet Union has been helping Poland meet its short-term hard currency requirements.

Gasoil for delivery in early February traded in a range of $296-$297 per metric ton in the spot market Wednesday. Last week similar cargoes were traded as high as $310 per metric ton.

Surplus in Payments

W. Germany

Sets a Post-War High

WIESBADEN, West Germany

— West Germany Wednesday
posted a strong surplus of 5.14 billion Deutsche marks in its December trade balance and at the same time reported that its current-account surplus of 4.9 billion DM set a post-war monthly high.

The Federal Statistics Office said the December trade surplus rose from 3.94 billion DM in November and was up from 1.01 bil-lion DM in December 1980.

It said the current-account surplus climbed from a surplus of 1.2 billion DM in November against a deficit of 822 million DM in December, 1980. The previous monthly record — 4.7 billion DM - was posted in December, 1974. Last October's surplus of 29 billion DM was the first positive balance since April, 1979.

For all of 1981, West Germany recorded a trade surplus of 27.9 billion DM, up from a surplus of 8.9 billion DM in 1980.

The 1981 current-account deficit narrowed to 17.5 billion DM from 29.8 billion DM in 1980, according to agency figures.

The statistics office reported that exports in December slipped 0.4 percent to 35.95 billion DM from 36.12 billion DM in November. Imports fell 4.2 percent to 30.81 billion DM from 32.17 billion DM in November.

Compared to December, 1980, exports last month rose 18.7 percent while imports increased 5.4

For all of 1981, exports totaled 396.99 billion DM, rising 13.3 percent from 350.32 billion DM in 1980. Imports climbed 8.1 percent to 369.11 billion DM from 341.38 billion DM the year earlier.

A spokesman for West Germany's industrial and trade association said the improved figures were caused by increased export efforts because of weak domestic demand.

Rate Difficulties

Reacting to the news, Frankfurt foreign exchange traders said earlier rumors of a large current-ac-count surplus had sent the dollar down to a fixing level of 2.3090 DM Wednesday from an opening at 2.3145 DM and Tuesday's fixing of 2.3395 DM. In recent days the mark had depreciated sharply against the dollar as a result rising U.S. interest rates and declining

Addressing the problem of rate differences in major markets, Hel-mut Schlesinger, Bundesbank vice president, said Wednesday that too rash a cut in West German interest rates could imperil the foreign exchange value of the mark. The last few days, since the Bundesbank cut its special Lombard rate one-half point to 10 percent, have indicated the danger, he said in a speech prepared for delivery to the Legal Society of Berlin.

"The inclination toward capital exports from West Germany has grown again, and as long as one needn't count on a sharp revaluation, the mark appears a cheap currency to borrowers," he said. Mr. Schlesinger said the constraints placed on the Bundesbank by foreign payment considerations have grown smaller but have not yet disappeared.

The Bundesbank has made use of what leeway it has had to lower interest rates, he said.

Mr. Schlesinger cautioned against focusing too much on interest rates as a factor in reviving the economy, adding that the fun-damental problems of the economy would remain and the profita-bility of companies would not be improved immediately just by cutting interest rates.

Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's government has been under pressure from trade unions and members of his Social Democratic Party to help cut interest rates to to stimulate the economy and create

Sony Introduces Pocket-Sized TV

TOKYO - Sony announced Wednesday that it will start marketing a miniature black-and-white television set with a two-inch (5-centimeter)

Dubbed the Flat TV, the unit measures 1.4 inches (37 millimeters) thick, 3.4 inches (88 millimeters) wide, and 8 inches (204 millimeters) long, and weighs 18.6 ounces (520 grams). It uses a cathode-ray tube that is only 0.6 inches (16 millimeters) thick, Sony said Flat TV will go on sale in Japan in February for 54,800 year ($239) each and will be introduced to the U.S. market "within this year." The miniature television appears to be aimed at the same market as Sony's Walkman, a portable cassette player that has been a major success.

French Launch World Computer Center

PARIS - The French government is launching a multimillion-dollar international center to design personal computer systems for education and training in both the industrialized countries and the Third World.

A statement issued after a Cabinet meeting Wednesday said the center would serve as a "crossroad of ideas and expertise" in smallcomputer technology. Jean-Jacques Servan-Schreiber was named to head the center, whose board will be international in scope but include at least nine French Cabinet ministers.

The World Center for Microcomputer Science and Human Re-sources reflects the Socialist government's strong belief in the computer as an agent for social change vhile further extending French efforts to compete against the Unit-ed States and Japan in the burgeoning computer and telecommunications market.

"This is not without precedent," says Michael Tyler, president of CSP International, a telecommunications research and consulting firm. "The French are already involved in such things as digital switches and videotex [televised transmission of texts]. This is part of a broad strategy to obtain pre-eminence in information process-

The center is expected to place a heavy emphasis on education projects in the Third World. Pilot projects are tentatively scheduled for Senegal, Kuwait, Ghana and the Saudi Oil Minister Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani has reportedly requested that the first project be set up in Saudi Arabia. It is possible that OPEC contributions might bolster the center's proposed 120-million-franc (about $20 million) annual budget.

In France, the center will undertake projects designed to retrain workers displaced by automation. Sources close to the center privately express concern over union reaction to this approach.

What impresses many observers is that the center has been able to attract some of the world's leading computer scientists. In addition to several Japanese and Third World participants, several U.S. computer scientists will play an active role

Nicholas Negroponte, a profes-sor of computer graphics, will take a leave of absence from MIT to become the center's first director. Seymour Papert, creator of a high-

BL Chairman Says Company Will Not Need Aid by 1986

Resters
LONDON --- Michael Edwardes, chairman of Britain's state-owned automaker BL, said Wednesday the company will no longer have to seek government subsidies after 1985.

Mr. Edwardes told a parliamen-tary committee BL will break even in 1983 in trading terms. The firm lost £387 million in 1980 and 1981 losses are projected around £500 Despite labor problems last year there had been the biggest increase in productivity per man in the npany's history. The work force fell to 87,000, instead of between 90,000 and 100,000 as projected, Earlier, BL said it had arranged a total of £227 million in unsecured eight and 10-year loans with 10 British and North American banks. The loans are part of a plan to raise £1.44 billion with similar loans, government funds and internal funds for investment in new models and new facilities between now and 1986, a BL spokeswoman said. The loans were secured on normal commercial terms, but she declined to give details.

When he called for the creation of such a center in a Nov. 20 speech, President Francois Mitterrand described the personal com-puter as a tool that would transform the nature of work, create employment and favor decenion's Robotics Institute are also Mr. Mitterand reportedly has taken a personal interest in the center. Consequently, Mr. Mit-terand has embraced new media technologies as part of his arsenal to promote what French newspapers have described as "creative Socialism" > terested in using the center's tech-nology to tighten links between France and the Third World. in his recent book, "The World Challenge," Mr. Servan-Schreiber argued that robotics technology

Mr. Mitterrand is said to be in-will cause massive unemployment in the industralized West unless new technologies offer opportuni-ties for employment. The book also suggests new technologies as a catalyst for Third World develop-

Mr. Negroponte compares the center's role to that of NASA, the U.S. space agency: "We expect to be working on a few large projects." But he concedes that many plans are still undetermined. Mr. Negroponte stresses that the center's work will not be just an extension of computer science research, but research directly aimed at applications for people without technical training. There is some skepticism on whether the center will actually do velop useful systems or simply be as one adviser to an international education organization described it, "a pie in the sky" effort. There is no question, though, that France wishes to establish the same kind of preeminence in personal computer software.

This has all the kind of lofty goals you associate with France," says Mr. Lucky. "You have the rest of the world looking on, half with admiration and half with reserved judgement."

U.S. Seeks to Withhold Interest, Dividend Tax

BUSINESS/FINANCE

WASHINGTON - The Reagan administration plans to propose the withholding of income taxes on dividends and interest as a way to reduce tax evasion and boost government revenue, Treasury Secre-tary Donald Regan said Wednes-

In testimony before the Joint Economic Committee of Congress. he said studies show that many people do not pay taxes on dividend and interest income and that tax evasion in this area accounts for as much as 12 percent of total tax liabilities.

The Treasury Secretary acknowledged that the new with-holding taxes will be unpopular and that he had opposed such measures when he was chairman of Merrill Lynch & Co. But he said that raising revenue this way would be preferable to increasing

Under the plan described by Mr. Regan, individuals earning $15,000 or less a year would be exempt from having taxes withheld on dividend and interest pay-

On other topics, the Treasury Secretary issued some of his strongest criticism yet of the Federal Reserve, contending that "erratic" money-supply growth in 1980 and 1981 had "contributed to the onset of the current down-

'Stability of policy is the key requirement for any permanent re-covery in output and employment," he said.

Mr. Regan told the congressional committee that the administration wanted the Fed to slow the growth in the money-supply gradually. Instead, he complained, the Fed has allowed the money supply to swing from sharp declines to very large increases. Such volatile money growth has very damaging effects on the economy," Mr. Regan said, adding that it "helps keep interest rates high as lenders seek to protect their principal." He said a recent sharp acceleration in money growth, which has been accompanied by rising interest rates, has renewed concerns about inflation and has "created enormous uncer-tainty in the financial markets."

Despite White House concern over the handling of monetary pol-icy, Mr. Regan said President Reagan is not going to call for the resignation of Fed Chairman Paul

From Agency Dispatches
NEW YORK — New York stock prices closed barely higher Wednesday and analysts said the market appeared to shrug off President Reagan's State of the Union message Tuesday night and focus its attention on possible actions by the Federal Reserve.

The Dow Jones industrial average at close was up 1.15 at 842.66. Advances led declines by around 770 to 640 and volume rose to some 50 million shares from 44.87 million Tuesday.

After the close, the Treasur said it would raise a record $41.25 billion in new cash in current quarter and also would ask Congress to raise interest ceiling that limits future hand sales

On currency exchanges, the dollar fell on news of strong West German trade figures but then latter recovered fairly active trading, dealers said. They said New York and Chicago both entered the market as beavy buyers of dollars.

In London, the dollar closed at 2.3193 Deutsche marks, up from 2.3085 at midsession and just above its opening 2.3165, but a little below Tuesday night's 2.3127. In corporate news, R.H. Macy, the retailer, and American Can Co.

both announced that they would buy blocks of their own stock.

Macy said its board had authorized the repurchase of up to 500,000 of its common shares. American Can said has accepted for payment 2.2 million of the shares under an offer made Jan.

From Tulsa, Cities Service said it will discontinue its plastics operations and incure a one-time aftertax charge of about $290 million, the company said the operations lost $45.6 million in 1981.

World Bank Cuts Low Cost Funds for Poorest

From Agency Dispatches
WASHINGTON — The World
Bank cut funds available for lowcost loans to its poorest members by more than a third Tuesday, formally recognizing that the United States has cut back substantially its contributions to the International Development Association, a bank affiliate, a spokesman said. The directors of the bank decided at a board meeting that only $2.6 billion would be available for "soft" IDA loans this year, a cut of $1.5 billion. The United States originally planned to give $1.08 billion to IDA this year but has now cut this to $750 million.

The bank also established a poli-cy, to be phased in over five years or in some cases a little longer, to direct countries to look to the private sector for new money once it reached a per capita income of Since the U.S. reduction in its constitution of $4.1 billion in the financial year ending on June 30.

$2,650 a year. The officials said the bank would monitor the graduation pol-icy and would modify it if that became necessary.

U.S. government sources said that the United States was unhappy, however, with the graduation guidelines, preferring them to be set at a lower amount.

The officials said that the per capita guideline was identical with those established previously, a development that the Reagan administration is certain to view with CODCETE.

The International Development Association was due to make loan tribution, other major donors, including all the major industrialized nations, have cut back correspond-

In partial compensation for the $1.5-billion cutback in loan commitments, the World Bank is to raise its ordinary lending this year by $800 million, or 8 percent, a spokesman said Tuesday. These funds, however, will only be available to countries able to pay the higher interest rates charged on the main World Bank loans, and who satisfy the stricter requirements of creditworthiness.

IDA money in the past, has already been warned that it will have a smaller share of these funds in the future. South Asia as a whole will have its IDA share for this year cut from $2.8 billion to $1.6 billion, while the sub-Saharan African countries will be cut from $1.1 billion to $900 million.

The South Asian countries will the main World Bank window as most of the African countries who have IDA loans are not considered sufficiently creditworthy.

The board said that the new guideline for "graduation" would only trigger discussions on phasing out bank borrowing, and would be applied flexibly.

STRANGE GODS The Great American Cult Scare By David G. Bromley and Anson D. Shupe Jr. Introduction by Harvey Cox. 249 pp. $13.50. Beacon Press 25 Beacon St., Boston, Muss. 02108

WHILE it would not be accurate to say that the United States has welcomed its various sects, it is nonetheless a home to many. The Shakers were originally English emigres; Mormonism is native born. assorted offsprings of mainland Protestantism have flourished in this country. Many a prominent U.S. politician has been revealed to belong to a sect obscure until his election. Dwight D. Eisenhower's family, for example, were members of the River Brethren, a branch of the Mennonites, and his mother eventually became a Jehovah's Witness. And it is ironic that it was the election of a Roman Catholic president, a member of a sect that pre-dates all other Christian sects in the United States, that occasioned the most fear. "At one time," say the authors of this valuable book, "Catholies experienced some of the most se-vere discrimination and violent per-secution in U.S. history."

"Strange Gods" is an exploration of six of today's most prominent cults: the Unification Church, the Children of God, the Hare Krishnas, the Divine Light Mission, the Church of Scientology and the People's Temple. But unlike most current chroniclers of American cults, David G. Bromley and Anson D. Shupe Jr. put their exegeses within a historical context. In doing so, they reject hysteria and slide such seemingly aberrant phenomena as "getting clear" and Krishna con-sciousness into, if not the mainstream, the tributaries of American religious experience. Some of the sects are, in fact, inspired guessers. Who would quarrel with the Children of God's ex-pectation of "The Time of the Great Confusion" (due, they said, in the late 1970s or early '80s), which would be marked by "a progressive worsening of the world situation, rampaging inflation, increased pollution, civil strife, political chaos and economic disaster"? What makes the present U.S. reaction to the new religions — aside from the bad odor lent them by the Rev. Jim Jones and the tragedy in Guyana - different from that of preceding generations, however, is that the main opposition to them is engendered not by the government or other established religions but by their members' families. It is their despair (a child lost to a saffron-yellow tobe and a pigtail by which to yank him into heaven seems lost indeed) that has given birth to deprogramming, the best known of whose practitioners is Ted Patrick. But deprogrammers such as Patrick appear to be more of a threat to the individual's civil liberties than any individual's civil liberties than any "brainwashing" does.

So, too, Bromley and Shupe say, are the confessions of apostates. For instance, "Crazy for God," the autobiography of Christopher Edward, a former follower of the Rev. Sun Myung Moon, is "a modern illustration of a literary genre as old as the anti-Mormon and anti-Catholic movements of the early 19th century." ments of the early 19th century."

Both the authors of "Strange Gods" and its designer are overinclined to take the reader by the hand. The writers are fond of phrases like "as we shall see" and "we begin this chapter"; the designers are fond of visual breaks for such matter as a definition of cuits or eventual for the use of mind courted to be begin to the use of the courted techniques. But for any mind-control techniques. But for any one who wants to read a sane, intelli-gent dissection of America's new religions and their zealous opposition this small, rather ugly book is a beau-

PROPHET OF BLOOD

The Untold Story of Ervil LeBaron and the Lambs of God By Ben Bradlee Jr. and Dale Van Atta. 350 pp. $15.95. Putnam, 200 Madison Ave., New York, N.Y. 10016.

THE AUTHORS call Ervil Le-A Baron a "charismatic energumen in the tradition of Charles Manson and, more recently, the Rev. Jim Jones of Guyana fame." Indeed, it is impossible to read of LeBaron's Lambs of God without recalling those other, more widely publicized cults. LeBaron and his Lambs did not get much press until the 1977 murder of Dr. Rulon Allred, with which the book opens. That murder --- executed by a two-woman hit squad -- spotlighted not just LeBaron's but a number of polygamist sects. Alired had been the leader of one sect, as were two of Ervil LeBaron's brothers. Ervil LeBaroa, in fact, had been born to "polygs," who had fled to Mexico following their excommunication from the Mormon Church.

There is a wealth of detail about this subculture, fascinating in and of itself. More interesting, though, is the meticulous account of the way Le-Baron subverted the doctrine of plural marriage to his own murderous ends.

Polygamist Community

"In a polygamist community," the authors tell us, "control of the women confers power, and Ervil understood that. Influencing them was tanta-mount to having a crony in every home." Thus LeBaron, while still a member of his brother Joel's Church of the Firstborn of the Fulness [sic] of Time, organized the secret United Women of Zion. They would rid the world of his many enemies. "He said the women were going to do the killing because people weren't suspicious of women," one participant recalls.

Another remembered that Ervil Le-Baron "really began to feel that he had God's power to go and take lives if he so desired . . . There was a lot of talk about 'put to death, put to death." LeBaron's 11th wife, Vonda, was his most willing killer, we learn in the book. Devoted to her husband, she shrugged off her "sheltered, innocent and Mormon-dominated childhood and became a "murderess in the name of God." Even LeBaron's male followers behave with aplomb in the face of the most grisly circumstances, the authors show. Lloyd Sullivan, who later de-fected, was with Ervil LcBaron when he noticed that LeBaron's Ford LTD was sagging. LeBaron had just ordered the execution of his-own daughter, Rebecca. "'I wonder if Rebecca's in the trunk.' LeBaron commented idly to Lloyd, who opened the trunk about four inches and was stunned to see Rebecca Chynoweth lying there . . . obviously dead."

More chilling is the book's account of the death of Robert Simons, who wrote LeBaron asking for information about the Lambs of God. Simons got more than he bargained for: a person-al visit from LeBaron. When Simons refused to acknowledge LeBaron as God's prophet, one of the Lambs drove Simons to the desert where two of the others were lying in wait. Weapons drawn, they tiptoed up to within five feet of their target, who, obligingly, was standing with his back to them. The Lambs reported to their leader that Simons had been shot, doused with lime and buried. What gave Ervil LeBaron — who had by this time declared himself the "One Mighty and Strong" — the ability to hold others in such thrall? Would we have been able to resist? This is, of course, what powers readers through documentaries about such figures. We test ourselves.

It is never a fair test, exactly, because we meet these monsters when their madness has run its course, when they are caged, reduced. Crucial, though, is the illusion of test.

Here it is maintained through the steady, painstaking accumulation of fact. LeBaron rises — and falls — before our very eyes. This book is scholarly in its attention to even the "dim constellations around the central sun of Ervil LeBaron.

Equally crucial is the perpetuation of threat. Bradlee and Van Atta tell us of "a hard-core dozen followers, scattered between Arizona and California.

. The leader of this group is son Arturo LeBaron, to whom Evil Le-Baron, according to prison writings police intercepted, has already passed on his mantle. At LeBaron's death, Arturo becomes the "One Mighty and Strong." In an addendum we learn that Ervil LeBaron died in his Utah State Prison cell on Aug. 16, 1981.

BOTH North-South pairs went bad-ly astray in the bidding of the di-agramed deal. The first two rounds of bidding were quite orthodox. South rightly opened on the strength of his powerful suit and quick tricks. North bid both black suits, and South was at the crossroads.

Both South players bid three notrump, taking a unilateral view. With only one diamond stopper he should have considered the possibility that a major-suit contract would be preferable. SCHLADMING, Austria - For two weeks of each even-numbered year the ski racing elite forgets about the World Cup so that it may record a few of its names for posterity. And so the 1982 World Alpine Skiing Championships ceremoniously opened here Wednesday with a colorful assembly of 36 national teams at the primary finish area. The International Skiing Federation will recognize the victors at this quadrennial extravaganza as world champions until 1984, when the distinction will pass to Olympic gold medalists. It is the title that matters here, for there is nothing that makes these races any more demanding or difficult than those on the World Cup circuit. Nor is the competition as great. More countries are represented here than in World Cup races, and each is limited to four entrants in each event aside from defending champions, who are automatically eligible.

Stemmark Defends Title

While some racers shrug off the championships as just another stop on a grueling winter tour, all must be aware of the jackpot: the potentially enriching endorsements and a name enshrined with those of Tony Sailer, Karl Schranz and Jean-Claude Killy.

Ingemar Stenmark of Sweden ingemar Stenmark of Sweden will be defending the slalom and giant slalom titles he won at the 1978 world championships in Garmisch-Partenkirchen, West Germany, and retained at the 1980 Obversion in Let Placel His chief Olympics in Lake Placid. His chief challenger is Phil Mahre of the United States, the World Cup

For Mahre it is an opportunity to erase the annoying asterisk of needing combined points to beat Stenmark for the World Cup title. It is a chance for Mahre to race Stenmark head to head in the spotlight of global television, and he is forgoing the opportunity to defend the combined title he won at Lake Placid so that he may concentrate on the slalom and giant slalom events late next week.

Mahre will be coming into the championships fresh from a slalom victory over Stenmark, a triumph in which he virtually clinched the overall World Cup title for the second straight year.

An Austrian Tradition

In the men's downhill Sunday, the Austrians will be trying to keep the title they have held since 1974, when David Zwilling dethroned Bernhard Russi with a gold medal in St. Moritz, Switzerland. Franz Klammer then won the 1976 Olympic downhill, and in 1978 Josef Walcher won at Garmisch. At Lake Placid, Walcher was

Breaking Up Is Hard to Do

By George Vecsey

New York Times Service

NEW YORK — It began as a love affair, and it ended the way love affairs often do. with the biggest truths known but unspo-

Openly and adoringly, Reggie Jackson once carved his initials in the apple tree. Reggie loves the Yankees. Five years later, George Steinbrenner no longer wanted Reggie Jackson around - probably not even as a designated hitter. If he had, Steinbrenner would have been able to keep him.

With as much dignity as possible under the circumstances. Reggie Jackson found a new home, new promises, and a fouryear contract with the California Angels. Paul Smon says there are 50 ways to leave your lover, but Reggie found the 51st: free agency.

No matter what Jackson said Tuesday at Anaheim Stadium, he would never have been in Orange County if George Steinbrenner had wanted him. But Steinbrenner's eyes had long ago grown cold and distant, hoping Jackson would pack his bags without making a scene and not even stay in the same neighborhood, the Yank-

At the end, there was a sevenparagraph publicity release, with Steinbrenner praising the way Jackson and his agent had conducted negotiations, and cit-ing Jackson's good qualities for the Hall of Fame. It was like Rhett Butler telling Scarlett he would write her a letter of recmendation if she ever wanted an office job in Atlanta.

Life After Oakland

It had started so passionately. Jackson was young when the Oakland A's won five straight division championships, but he knew there must be something more to life than the braying of Charles O. Finley's pet mule. Reggie made his break, to Baltimore, but his heart was set on New York. Riding through New York City in the Orioles' bus one day in 1976, Jackson entertained his temporary teammates by speculating which penthouse would one day be his: Should he live on Riverside Drive or Central Park West or Fifth Avenue? Reggie let himself be romanced by other clubs in the fall of 1976, a whirlwind courtship while his agent, Gary Walker, who does not believe in airplanes, followed Reggie around in a motor home, to make sure the club owners' intentions were honest. It was all over the day George

Steinbrenner strolled Reggie around the East Side. Memory is a little blurred by now, but the impression is that there were violinists on street corners, waiters pouring champagne George and Reggie waited for the lights to change. There may even have been a Yankee general manager ringing the bells in the tower of St. Patrick's, which is what general managers do when they work for George. Steinbrenner held nothing back as he wooed Reggie in public. That's the way love affairs go at the beginning.

For five years the couple had a love affair, right out in the open. There is no need to catalog all the spats and the reconciliations. Sometimes Jackson. came to regret ever coming to New York, came to feel the city and the team were against him.

Reggie Jackson and his new boss, Gene Autry, were all smiles after Jackson signed a four-year contract with the California Angels for $700,000 a year. Attendance incentives could increase the figure to nearly $1 million.

Sometimes he owned New York. For five years Reggie Jackson was as charismatic and heroic as any Yankee has ever been, but that was hardly enough for a man with a high Intelligence Quotient and an even higher Ego Quotient. He had to be in the middle of everything.

Picture Reggie in a World Series game, hitting a sacrifice fly to deep center field. He passes first base and watches the outfielder catch the ball. He stands motionless, inspects the futile throw to the infield, follows his teammate's progress to home plate and the dugout.

Then Reggie turns and waits until the "1" flickers on the Yankee line in the scoreboard. Satisfied that everybody else in the ballpark has done the job, Reggie is now content. He claps his hands once, and consents to jog back to the dugout, allowing the game to continue. He is having a love affair with baseball and the Yankees and, like many lovers, with himself.

The affair could have survived all the little indiscretions like the aual lateness to spring training. George and Reggie savored those scenes, like couples who enjoy throwing dishes around the love nest, because it is so The affair could not survive Reggie turning 35. It wasn't his temperament and it wasn't his salary, it was the wrinkles and the gray hairs in his batting av-

Last spring Jackson struggled to raise his batting average to 200. He lost his supreme confidence; his muscles were still in the right places, but for the first time in his career he felt mortal. It showed in his eyes.

When the baseball players went on strike in June, Reggie was the Yankee representative who informed the other players: "Go home, the season's over." Of all the Yankees, Jackson break in the schedule. He made jokes about needing a midsummer vacation, but he wasn't

The Final Chapter

When the strike ended, Steinbrenner sent Reggie to the doctor to see if Jackson needed glasses or Geritol or plastic surgery or a shrink. Kind words might have sufficed but the owner had aiready turned cold. More than ever, Jackson began referring to the owner in obscene and furious tones. Hell hath no fury like a superstar scomed.

The rage produced better baseball from Reggie Jackson, including one marvelous clutch home run in the final game of the Eastern Division playoffs a "one more time" for Reggie to stand in the batter's box and lovingly inspect the beauty of a long one, deep to right. When the season ended, Jackson cleaned out his locker, but that was just a call for attention. All he wanted was a word that he was still Reggie Jackson, that he was still Mr. October, that the violinists and the champagne and the bells of St. Patrick's would always be there for working late at the office this winter, bringing in new people named Griffey and Collins.

Reggie and George never threw dishes at each other this January. One day it was all over. On Tuesday, Reggie Jackson moved across the country, to California, to start over again, the way people do when love dies. He was hardly out of the house when George started redecorating.

NEW YORK — John McEnroe has won his appeal of the $5,000 fine imposed on him for misbehavior last year at Wimbledon.

A three-man arbitration council voted 2-1 on Tuesday in favor of sustaining the major-offense charge against McEnroe and the $5,000 fine. Under the 1981 code of conduct, however, a unanimous decision was necessary to sustain a charge.

McEnroe who won last summer's tournament, had named one member of the panel — Harry Hopman, a former Australian Davis Cup captain — and it was Hopman who cast the vote for dismissal. The other members, named with it," said a headline in the Dai-

The Book at Pooh Corner

Reading to Children, From A.A. Milne to Arthur Schlesinger

By Glenn Collins

New York Times Service TEW YORK — Even as the celebrations marking the 100th anniversary of the birth of A.A. Milne proceed, parents in 60 countries are reading to their children in 25 languages from among the more than 30 million published copies of "Winnie-the-Pooh" about the adventures of Pooh, Piglet, Eeyore, Tigger, Kanga and Roo.

They are continuing the tradition that gave birth to Pooh in the first place. "Uncle Remus was read aloud to us by Papa, a chapter a night." Milne wrote in his 1939 autobiography, "It's Too Late Now." "When, 40 years later, I wrote a book called Winnie-the-Pooh' I remembered all that Uncle Remus and Reynard the Fox and the animal stories in Aunt Judy's Magazine had meant to us. I had the happy feeling that here was a magic which children, from generation to generation, had been unable to

One of the memories cherished by Alan Alexander Milne (1882-1956) was that of his father reading aloud. The tradition was passed to Milne's son, Christopher, who was the model for Christopher Robin and who, in turn, read to his daughter.

was read to until I was 14 or 15, and I believe that reading aloud to children is essential." Christopher Milne, 61, said by telephone from his home in Dartmouth, England, where he is a bookshop proprietor. "It was almost a tradition in our house to have our daily chapter of Wodehouse. In fact, my mother read Wodehouse to myself and my fa-ther, and we also had Lewis Carroll and lots and lots of Lear,"

Although Christopher Milne has spent many years trying to free himself from the imprisoning effects of his fictional persona, he does not question the enjoyment that Christopher Robin and his friends have given others. Parents' Delight

"I think the delight that parents have taken in reading the Pooh books to their children accounts for their great populari-ty," he said. "It only takes 20 minutes or so a day to read to a child. Yet it leaves a lovely warm feeling that lasts you all your life. It's almost greater than any other pleasure a parent and child can share." His views are born out by researchers from a variety of disci-"Reading to children can en-hance their language develop-ment, can expand their vocabularies and give them a more advanced understanding of grammatical forms," said Jeanne S. Chall, professor of education at the Harvard University Graduate School of Education and director of the institution's reading labo-

Arthur Schlesinger Jr. reading to his son Robert, 9.

Chall said there had been a convergence in the findings of reading researchers, developmental psychologists, linguists and language anthropologists about the value of reading aloud. "Naturally, it's been a long historical tradition too," she said. "There is the ancient practice of reading the Bible aloud as well as the advice in the Talmud that fathers should seat their children on their laps at the age of 6 months and begin reading to them." From the 1920s through the 50s parents were told by many educators that they should not teach their children reading at home. "But more and more we're realizing how important it is for parents to impart basic skills," said Nancy Larrick, a reading specialist and a founder of the International Reading Associa-tion, a scholarly group, "Kinder-garten teachers can always tell kids who have been read to.'

Challenge of TV

Larrick said reading at home had been challenged in recent years by television. "There are many more one-parent homes and working couples, and fre-quently children turn on the TV because nobody's there." She also noted that working parents may feel too tired to read to their

Chall said it was important not to stigmatize parents who do not read to their children. "Kids who are not read to at home can still become good readers," she said. "That's why a good school or a library is so important."

Librarians, who have long believed in the value of reading to older children in the traditional story hour, are trying to encourage reading to children at earlier ages.

"I think the trend toward working with preschoolers derives from the recent focus on early childhood development, which has stirred librarians' interest in this area," said Betsy Hearne of Booklist, the book-review magazine of the American Library Association in Chicago.

"The publishers have finally caught on, and there are more books that can be read to babies now than ever before," she said. "But buying enough of them is just too expensive for most parents, and so the public librarian's job has been to present the enormous range of books available to Reading to children is the theme of the 1982 educational program of the Children's Book Council, a nonprofit association of publishers of children's books that sponsors National Chil-dren's Book Week and encourages the enjoyment of children's books.

Advice on reading to children is not the exclusive province of the experts; parents have strong opinions too.

"I believe that any boredom a parent may feel in reading to children is strongly communicat-ed to them," said the historian Arthur Schlesinger Jr. "That's why I think that the books being read should always be of interest to parents as well as to children."

Schlesinger has carried on a family tradition by reading to his children; he was reading a swash-buckling volume called "Pirates in History" to his 9-year-old son. Robert, the night before he was interviewed. "If children are read to, they learn to regard books as part of the landscape," he said. He has continued another tradition: His mother was not only a spirited reader-aloud but also "an astute skipper," he said. "and I'm a skipper too."

"It's certainly allowable to skip some detail, but you can't do it without being a fast read-er," he advised. "You try to glance ahead and conceal the fact that you're skipping. Of course, I've been caught many times."

Supporting Ex-Presidents PEOPLE: Supporting Ex-Presidents
To Cost U.S. $25 Million

With a newly adorned office, Jimmy Carter is relishing the luxuries of being a former president — a position with no formal pow-ers, but likely to cost U.S. taxpayers about $25 million this year. In 1982, the government can be expected to pay more for former presidents - Carter, Richard M. Nivon and Gerald R. Ford. and their families and presidential widows, for pensions, Secret Service protection and other expenses, and operating money for presidential libraries and museums - than to run the White House. It all started in 1959, when $55,129 was paid to Harry Truman after Congress - pitying his meager financial state - passed the Former Presidents Act to help him out. Democratic Sen. Lawton Chiles of Florida, who is campaigning to restrict the expenditures, said taxpayer support for Truman's successors and their families has been "growing like Topsy." Many of the expenses are absurd and wasteful, he contends. He cited: Secret Service agents who are "going bonkers" watching the residence of 97-yearold Bess Truman (he suggested that the highlight of their day is the arrival of the mailman); the dispatching of a team of 10 or 12 Secret Service agents to accompany Lady Bird Johnson on a chartered Mediterranean cruise, although the agency feels there is no threat to the former first lady; Ford's decision to set up not only a library at the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, but a separate museum in his hometown of Grand Rapids, Mich., 130 miles away: Government costs for the

Koch He was quoted in The Washington Post as saving he was "surprised that the president did not appoint a centennial commission, yet suddenly he invites the entire family to the White House."

British novelist Doris Lessing, 62, is this year's winner of the 1, 25,000-mark ($10.730) Shakespeare prize awarded by the FVS speare prize awarded by the PVS foundation of Hamburg. Lessing, who lives in London, will be given the prize at a ceremony in Hamburg City Hall on June 10. U.S. physicist Kelvin Quate was given a $55,500 prize by the Rank Prize Funds for his work in optical electronics. Quate, a professor of applied physics and electical engineering at Stanford University in California, was honored for his work on the scanning acoustic microscope, which uses sound rather than light to form images.
